PERPETUAL INJUNCTION AGAINST WATER CO.

Boalsburg Company Wins on State College Concern.

APPEAL LOOKED FOR

Believed that Defendant Company Will Refuse to Accept the Decree of Judge Orvis And Will Ask Higher Courts for Reversal

Judge Orvis on Saturday handed down a decree making perpetual and final the injunction asked by the Boalsburg Water Company restraining the State College Water Company from using the surplus water from the Galbraith Gap stream. The costs are placed on the State College Water Company. The case has already involved considerable litigation and in all likelihood will go to the higher courts on an appeal from the decree of Judge Orvis. The decree in the case, in part, was as follows:

"Both plaintiff and defendant having filed exceptions to our opinion and decree, Nisi, it now becomes our duty to finally dispose of the said exceptions and to make our final decree in the cause While the defendant has made many written exceptions, his counsel in oral argument largely turned the case upon one proposition. In which the learned counsel for the defendant admitted that there were no direct authorities for any such position, they urged upon us with much learning and zeal to take a step in advance of all decisions in Pennsylvania namely, to hold that one Water Company could be allowed by a Court in Equity to condemn and take the water supply already appropriated under condemnation proceedings and belonging to another Water Company. After carefully considering again both the oral and written argument, we do not feel that the facts in this case or the equities shown by the defendant Water Company will justify us in attempting to establish a precedent in apparent conflict with the trend of judicial opinion in the State. We do not say that circumstances may not arise wherein by reason of overwhelming necessity and for the preservation of considerable communities the court may not be driven as a matter of public policy to compel water companies to share with each other their sources of water supply, even though the water company in possession has obtained said water supply under the right of eminent domain. But as we now view the case, we do not see such urgent reasons as would justify us in taking such an advanced position. The plaintiff company has acquired control of a small mountain stream, with a flow which at most times of the year is in excess of the needs of the corporation. At some times of the year considerably in excess. The stream, however, in itself is a small one and affords a water supply that as a matter of prudence is not greater than a small water company should control for the needs of even such a community as the village of Boalsburg and the surrounding population in Harris township.

"The defendant, on the other hand, owns and controls the only other important source of water supply in the same township, a supply which by reason of its flow is sufficient in quantity as well as quality for the needs of its customers up to the present time, and if the said flow of water would be stored by the defendant company would be sufficient for years to come, even for any anticipated growth of the Borough of State College. In addition, the defendant corporation can resort to a very large spring near the Borough of State College, whose flow of water is amply sufficient for a population many times larger than the present one in the Borough. In order to save itself the cost and expense of storage in the one source of supply and pumping in the other, the defendant company has elected to run the risk of expenses in litigation and possibly large damages from lower riparian owners, and asks us to authorize the said company to take and control a part of the third and only remaining source of water supply in that neighborhood. As this course is one of expediency we do not feel that it raises such equities as would justify the intervention of the arm of a chancellor. ***

"It is ordered, adjudged and decreed that the preliminary injunction granted on the 18th. of November, 1910, and by our decree, Nisi, filed December 2, 1911, made perpetual is hereby made final and perpetual. Costs of record to be paid by the defendant."

CENTRE COUNTIANS DINE

Association in Philadelphia Hold Delightful Reunion

The Centre County Association of Philadelphia on Monday night held their annual dinner at the Continental Hotel. The evening proved to be a most enjoyable one for all fortunate enough to be there. Telling of the event, the Philadelphia "North American" said.

Old friendships were renewed on Monday night at the eighth annual banquet of the Centre County Association of Philadelphia, held at the Continental Hotel.

Centre county is known througout the length and breadth of the state as the producer of governors. From that county have come such men as Andrew G. Curtin, the war governor: Daniel H. Hastings and James A. Beaver.

None of these famous names was forgotten that night and tributes were paid to all by the members of the association, who, at one time or another, hailed from the center of the state.

The guest of honor was Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh. Doctor Brumbaugh was born in Huntingdon county, a neighboring county to Centre, and he recalled to the memories of the banqueters incidents that happened in the two counties two-score years ago.

Doctor Brumbaugh paid a tribute to the country boys and girls who later in life emigrate to the city. They, he declared, are in many ways better fitted to fight the battles of life than the city-bred boy or girl.

"The country boy is compelled to find out of his own resources the solution to his difficulties," declared Doctor Brumbaugh. "The city boy is raised with everything virtually at his elbow, and instead of solving his own difficulties, he seeks assistance that is always at hand. It is the environment of the country boy that makes him a good citizen of the city when he becomes a man."

The speaker declared that men and women who had been born and raised in the country should never forget their one-time surroundings on the farm and in the country village. "To live right, he said, part of each year should be spent in the country communing with nature.

In speaking of the early history of Pennsylvania he said that the first soldiers to reinfocre Washington after he had assumed the command of the colonial troops at Cambridge, Mass., were troops gathered from Centre, Huntingdon and York counties.

Several musical and vocal selections were rendered by former residents of the upstate county Those who participated in this feature of the evening's entertainment were: Vocal solo, Mrs. William W. Foster; reading, Miss Lydia Uuderwood; vocal solo, Mrs. Mary H. Magee; reading, Miss Lillian A. Reece; accompanist, Chauncey Delong.

Newspaper Changes Hands.

The Philipsburg "Ledger," for a number of years conducted by Miss Annie V. Williams, was on Monday purchased by the Richards Printing Company, of Philipsburg. The members of the firm are H. W. Boulton and Ralph Richards, of Houtzdale. Mr. Richards will move his family from Houtzdale to Philipsburg. Miss Williams severs all connection with the paper. She is well and favorably known and a host of friends regret that newspaper circles are to lose her valued presence and services.

Title Searchers Finish.

The corps of clerks searching titles for the several tracts comprising the site for the new penitentiary finished their work at the Court House on Saturday, last. Governor Tener has signified his approval of the proposed purchase and the actual transfer will be made in the next week or two.

TO PUT NEW BOILER IN OLD FIRE ENGINE

Bellefonte Council Contracts for $1175 Repairs for Undines.

DROP MOTOR TRUCK

Mr. Grimm Urged Thoughtful Consideration of Purchasing Most Modern Fire Equipment Before Spending so Much For Repairs.

After being out of commission for some time, due to a worn out boiler, the Undine Hose Company fire engine is to be thoroughly overhauled at a cost of $1175. The contract for the repairs was approved at Monday night's meeting of Bellefonte borough Council. The repairs will be made by The American LaFrance Fire Engine Company. of Elmira, N. Y., the makers of this particular style of engine. The company guarantees that the proposed repairs will put the engine in such shape that it will virtually be as good as new.

The chief item of expense in the proposed repairs will be a new boiler and fire-box. This will cost $1100. The item for $75 represents a relief valve, to be attached to the engine and which is a regular feature of all modern fire apparatus. In many instances, as is well known, more damage is done at fires by water than by flames. As a rule this is not so much the fault of the firemen as of the old-fashioned apparatus used. By means of a relief valve attached to the fire engine it becomes possible for the firemen to turn off a stream of water at the nozzle. The hose may then be moved from one part of the building to another without resulting in damage to property by water. Without the relief valve on the engine, to shut off the water at the nozzle means bursted hose and possibly a broken engine.

As was pointed out at the meeting of Council by Harry Keller, the president, the repairs will be comparatively insignificant but a comparatively small outlay by the borough for the Undine fire engine. In the first place, the engine was not purchased by the borough, but by the Undine Hose Company with funds in its treasury and money raised by popular subscription. During the eighteen or nineteen years the engine has been in service here it has cost but a few dollars a year to keep it in first-class repair It is believed that by installing a new boiler the engine will be good for many more years to come. The engine was yesterday sent to Elmira, N. Y., to be repaired, and will be away about 45 days.

The advisability of having the borough purchase a chemical motor truck was brought up by Mr. Grimm, of the West Ward. In the discussion that followed it developed that the cost of such a piece of modern fire apparatus would be about $6700. P. H. Gherrity, chief fire marshall, who was present, explained that the securing of such additional equipment would, of course, greatly improve the fire service in the borough, but that in his judgment it would be impossible to afford anything like adequate protection with one fire engine, only. This seemed to be the universal belief among the members of Council and the matter was dropped. Mr. Grimm said that he thought it well to consider such matters, the trend of fire apparatus manufacture for cities and also towns favoring the motor truck idea.

High School Banquet.

The Ferguson township High School held their annual banquet in the I. O. O. F. Hall, at Pine Grove Mills, on Friday evening, February 16, 1912. The occasion was opened by an entertainment given by the members of the school. Bryan Smith recited the opening address. Miss Mary Woods presided at the piano and Miss Bertha Smith sang three beautiful solos. After a few interesting recitations there followed a farce entitled, "The Yankee Peddler," which brought down the house. The entertainment closed with an excellent address by Prof. L. P. White. Then followed a splendid banquet, for which 250 covers were laid. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and it was five o'clock in the morning when the guests departed for their respective homes.

Presented With Diamond Ring.

Hon. S. B. Elliott, member of the State Foresty Reserve Commission, on Friday of last week delivered two very interesting lectures on "Forestry" to Bellefonte audiences. At the evening lecture he presented J. Linn Harris with a diamond ring, purchased by popular subscription as a testimonial to Mr. Harris for his efforts in helping to secure the new penitentiary for this section.

COMMISSIONERS DEMAND $1558 FROM BOROUGH

PAYMENT IS DEFERRED

Council Turns Request for Check Over to Sub-Committee—State Treasurer Recently Deducted Amount from Funds Due County.

In a letter addressed to the Bellefonte Borough Council and read at Monday night's meeting, the Board of County Commissioners stated that the borough's share of the cost of State road work in town was $1558.40, that the State had deducted this amount from funds due the county, and would the borough's check for the amount be kindly forwarded by return mail. Council received the letter, carefully listened while it was being read by the clerk, W. T. Kelley, and instead of forwarding a check by return mail or any other mail disposed of the matter for the time being by referring it to the Street Committee and the borough solicitor for their thoughtful consideration.

In requesting that the borough's check for $1558.40 be forwarded at once to settle the account, the Board of County Commissioners explained that they were badly in need of money. The borough is in a like condition. Hence the referring of the matter to a sub-committee.

Council have been aware for some time past just what the borough's share of the State road amounted to. Payment of the bill has been deferred for various reasons. One reason put forth was that perhaps the bill wasn't due. The other reasons were not publicly stated. The matter was brought to a head, however, when the State last week deducted from the county the county's share of the State road cost and also that of the borough. The Board of County Commissioners th[illegible] the borough to pay [illegible]

While Council did not pay the bill for State road work, it did make a payment of $125 of a bill for $175 rendered by R. B. Taylor for building 350 feet of concrete curbing on either side of West High Street, between the race and the Spring creek bridge. The rate charged was 50 cents per foot. The curb was built just when winter weather was setting in. Council withheld $50 from the bill until summer happens along and reveals whether the concrete work has been damaged by freezing. Council ordered payment made of a bill for $51, rendered by M. R. Johnson for concrete work on the Benner sidewalk, on High Street. The bill had been held up temporarily pending more definite information as to what constituted the borough's portion of the total cost of the work done. The total amount of bills paid before adjournment was $715.

Worthy of Emulation.

In Lycoming County a new order of things has been adopted which might be emulated with good results in Centre Connty.

Judge Whitehead, of Lycoming county, has ordered that papers taken from the prothonotary's offices must be returned to that branch of the court within five days. It has been the custom of many members of the legal fraternity to keep out papers for a longer period, but members so offending at present will find it difficult to secure papers in the future. Deputy Prothonotary Sones has prepared a book in which the papers taken out are recorded and a close watch will be kept to see that no lawyer retains possession of papers from the prothonotary's office for a period exceeding the time set by the court. The rule is made as a matter of convenience to the lawyers, as many attorneys seek papers only to find that another barrister has had possession of them for some time. Prothonotary Gallagher states that a short time ago he requested the return of papers which had been in the possession of a certain lawyer for twelve years.

To Test Land Rights.

The question of the extent of the State's right to condemn land that was once taken up on warrant will be threshed out at a meeting of the State Board of Property at its March meeting in Harrisburg. An application has been filed for a tract of land in Franklin county contiguous to a State reserve. The State wants the land for the public domain, but people living in that country also desire the property. The property was taken upon a warrant years ago, but it lapsed and the effort will be made to obtain it for the enlargement of the reserves.

ONCE BOLD SWINDLER GIVES WAY TO TEARS

George Page Sentenced to Huntingdon Reformatory.

USED "PHONY" CHECKS

Plead Guilty Before Judge Orvis to Defrauding Several Bellefonte Business Men—Sentence Suspended on Most Recent Charges.

Judge Orvis on Saturday sentenced George Page to the Huntingdon Reformatory. Page is the young man who swindled a number of Bellefonte merchants by means of worthless checks. He was committed to the Huntingdon Reformatory on the charge of passing a fraudulent check for about $18 on Harry C. Yeager, the shoe dealer, some time ago. Sentence was suspended on Page's more recent cases of defrauding local merchants.

A brief session of court was held by Judge Orvis on Saturday, at which time Page appeared, waived the finding of a grand jury and plead guilty of the charge entered against him. His escape from a long term in the Western Penitentiary was a surprise to most persons. Before passing sentence on the young man, Judge Orvis gave him a fatherly talk on the grave character of the crimes he had committed. He pointed out that any one of the several cases was sufficiently grave to warrant a term in the penitentiary. By good behavior and an honest, sincere effort to reform himself while at the Huntingdon Reformatory, Judge Orvis added, the opportunity was afforded Page to redeem himself and become a useful citizen on regaining his liberty. Failure to behave himself while at Huntingdon, or after leaving that institution, Judge Orvis explained, would result in the prisoner's being recalled and sentenced to a term in the penitentiary.

When Page entered the court room to plead guilty he apparently was but little concerned over the likelihood of a prison sentence. Before Judge Orvis had concluded his talk to him, however, Page had broken down and his face was wet with tears.

CORPORATIONS WARNED

Internal Revenue Department Calls Attention to Filing Statements.

A warning to corporations to file with the internal revenue department the statement of their business during the last calendar year has been issued by Griffith T. Davis, collector for the Twelfth Internal Revenue district.

There are 2,600 corporations in this district, and they have until March 1 to file their returns. All delinquents are subject to prosecution, unless offers in compromise are made. According to the figures in the revenue office, there are 1,600 corporations still unheard from this year, and there are but twelve days left to file returns before the time limit expires.

The filing of a statement of the net income is mandatory by act of congress which levies a special tax of one per cent. upon all net income over $5,000 upon all corporations and limited partnerships. Corporations whose net income does not exceed $5,000 are not exempted from filing the returns.

Every corporation that fails to file the required return within the time limit becomes liable to a specific penalty of from $1,000 to $5,000. Failure to file the return in case the tax is due also subjects the company to an assessment of 50 per cent. in addition to the tax.

Collector Davis declared this morning that the only notice to corporations will be in the newspapers and that those who have not received the blank forms should write immediately to the collector and file the same without delay. The government, he said, is under no obligation to furnish these blanks, but does so only as a matter of courtesy and convenience. Failure to receive blanks will not be regarded as ground from relief from penalties incurred.

According to the information gathered in the revenue office, there were 400 corporations who were delinquent in filing their returns last year. Of this number, all but twenty-three made acceptable offers in compromise, and those who did not settle with the department will be prosecuted at the February term of U. S. court, which opens in Scranton March 11. Since the names of the offending corporations have been sent to the United States attorney, eight have made offers in settlement, agreeing to pay a fine and the costs of the action. The court will have to dispose of these cases.

DR FLICKINGER DEAD

Was Principal of State Norman School at Lock Haven.

After an illness of several weeks, Dr. J. R. Flickinger principal of the Lock Haven State Normal School, died rather unexpectedly shortly after 1 o'clock on Saturday morning of last week. The cause of death was perforation of the stomach. The attending physicians were entirely confident of his recovery until Friday, when his condition took a sudden turn for the worse and he rapidly declined until he passed away.

Speaking of his death, the Lock Haven "Express" says that it is a great loss to the entire community, as well as to the state at large, for he was a man who was active and earnest in all departments of life that were for the betterment and uplift of the people. The Central Normal school and Lock Haven will sadly feel his loss, for he was an able and successful educator and a good citizen in the best meaning of the word. His widow and only daughter will have the heartiest sympathy of all our people in their sorrow over the loss of a devoted husband and loving and indulgent father.

The funeral services were held in the chapel of the Normal school Monday evening at 7 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. C. H. Williamson, pastor of Great Island Presbyterian church. The body was taken to New Bloomfield, Pa., Tuesday morning on the 8.10 o'clock Bald Eagle train for burial.

Junius R. Flickinger, A. R., A. M., D. S., was born October 19, 1854, near Loysville, Perry county, Pa., and was a little over 57 years old at the time of his death. He was educated in the schools of Perry county and at the New Bloomfield academy. In 1877 he graduated in the classical course at Princeton university. After this he was principal for five years of the New Bloomfield academy and also served for three years as county superintendent of the public schools of his native county. He later studied law and was admitted to the bar of Perry county. In 1886 he was elected to the State Legislature from his home county and during the session of 1887 was one of the most active and influential members of the committee on education.

In the year 1887 he went to Pueblo, Colorado, where he engaged in the practice of law, but still retained an interest in educational affairs. In consequence of this interest he was appointed by Governor Routt one of the trustees of the proposed State Normal school. He was greatly instrumental in establishing this school which was located at Greeley, and has since become one of the foremost Normal schools in the United States.

Dr. Flickinger was chosen a member of the Colorado Legislature in 1891 and was chairman of the committee on appropriations, one of the most important committees in the Legislature, and also an active member of the educational committee. Through his influence a large appropriation was secured for the new Normal school at Greeley. On account of his important services he was unanimously nominated for the Senate by the Republican convention at Pueblo, but declined on account of his contemplated removal from the state.

In 1893 he took the chair of history in the West Chester, Pa., State Normal school and at the same time took a two year's post graduate course in pedagogy, constitution history and psychology at the University of Pennsylvania. In the year 1896 he was chosen principal of the Edinboro State Normal school, where his success was most marked, that school having been practically destroyed by factional quarreling. His success in bringing about harmony and restoring confidence in the school, and in making it a prosperous institution of learning, proved him to be possessed of marked executive ability.

Upon the resignation of Dr. James Eldon as principal of the Central State Normal school this city, early in November, 1899, Dr. Flickinger was elected as his successor. Under his capable management the Central State Normal has become one of the best in the state. He carefully looked after the regligious work of the school, both a Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. being organized early in his management. He had the confidence and esteem of the faculty, and the students loved him for his many excellent qualities of heart and mind.

SUICIDE BY POISON

While seated at the breakfast table at the home of his brother-in-law, George Smith, at Wolfs Store, Foster Gessner on last Thursday killed himself by swallowing strychnine.

The Centre Hall "Reporter" says that for several years Gessner worked among farmers in lower Brush Valley, and while employed by Harry Limbert, Miss Flossie Runkle, daughter of Israel Runkle, of Wolfs Store, and niece of James W. Runkle, of Centre Hall, was a helper in the house. Eight or ten weeks ago the couple were married. Gessner tried to purchase furniture., etc., with which to begin housekeeping, but he was without funds and no one had confidence enough in him to become his security. This is said to have greatly worried him. He was employed by O. F. Stover, east of Rebersburg, at the time of the tragedy. The day before the fatal Thursday, he had been at Coburn, and in the evening he walked from Mr. Stover's place to that of Mr. Smith's at Wolf's Store, being under the impression that his wife was there, but on arriving at Mr. Smith's he discovered "Flossie" was at her home at Woodward.

Gessner went to his room at night, but did not go to bed—instead he walked the floor until morning. After daylight he walked out, and was gone for sometime, but returned for a late breakfast. Without intimating what he had done, he sat down to the breakfast, and the result is noted above.

The unfortune man was aged but twenty-one years. Interment was made at Wolf's Store, Rev. Bingaman officiating. The funeral was attended by his wife.

$6000 a Year for Gowns.

Testifying in a suit for separation on the ground of abandonment. Mrs. Albert Gallatin Wheeler, Jr., formerly Claudia Carlstedt in comic opera, pictured in the New York Supreme court last Friday the splendor in which she had lived with Wheeler and declared that it was impossible for her to live on the $6,000 her husband had allowed her since he left her.

Wheeler, who was a member of the Wall street firm of J. B. Russell & Co., which was recently dissolved, did not oppose the suit but contended that he was unable to pay more than $100 a month alimony. His attorney said the abandonment was because Mrs. Wheeler was "of too artistic a temperament."

Mrs. Wheeler said her husband had an income of $140,000 a year, when he married her, that he had once borrowed $2,000,000 from E. H. Harriman and that he had raised perhaps $22,000,000 for Chicago tunnels. She told of apartments which they had in New York where it cost $25,000 "just to keep the furnishings in order and to run the motor cars," and of long trips in Wheeler's private car which had cost $6,000 a week. Her dresses alone, she had cost her $6,000 a year.

The Wonders of Light.

What is light? Whether it be the dim fox-fire produced by decaying wood, the mystical gleam of a firefly or a glow worm in the shadowy forest, the "Will-o'the Wisp" that flits hither and thither over a marsh, the flash from a meteor flying swiftly across the sky, the tremendous quiver from out the vast abyss of the star depths, the emblazoned pathway of a bolt of lightning, or whether it be the illumination produced by a pine knot, a candle, a gas jet, an incandescent mantle or filament, light is one of nature's mysteries—a problem set for man to solve.

And man has learned in the ages that have elapsed since he was created, that by far the greatest part of the mystery lies with himself. The perception of light, heat, sound, and possibly of other forms of energy to which he cannot as yet give even a name, depends almost entirely upon the chemical and physical—especially in the brain and its faithful outposts in the nervous system. In our consideration of the wonderful properties of light we shall not dwell at length upon the psychological phases of the subject, but shall attempt to make clear some of the simpler physical phenomena with which everyone is more or less familiar, but which are nevertheless not generally understood. We shall regard light as a form of energy, a definite thing—the thing that enables us to see, the thing that gives us the power to distinguish green from red, the thing that hammers away at the emulsion on a photographic plate causing the chemicals therein contained to deposit a thin film of metallic silver, which we may utilize in making a picture of a landscape, a comet, or the face of some dear friend.—Popular Mechanics.

WILLS HORSES TO DIE

Owner Feared Faithful Animals Might Fall into Rough Hands.

While a couple of old horses looked on in dignified curiosity from the windows of their stalls a gang of workers this week loosened a foot or two of ice and snow and bored curious two-inch holes in the frozen ground just beyond a flower bed on the estate of the late Mrs. Mathilde Church-Keller, Riverside Mansion, Wormleysburg.

The horses are a pair that were used in the family coach for years and which, according to the will of their mistress, are to be shot in order to prevent their falling into the hands of someone who may ill-treat them.

And the workmen in the garden were preparing to dig the graves.

According to the terms of the will, the old horses, faithful throughout much of the lifetime of their mistress, will not be taken from the stable again—not even to be watered.

They are being fed and watered and given the best of care for the few remaining weeks they have yet to live.

Provision is made in Mrs. Church-Keller's will not only for the death of the animals, but for their burial as well. In a far corner of the big lawn, just beyond a great flower bed that is all colorful and fragrant from early summer until Nature says a late summer good-by, the graves are to be.

Digging the hole during the cold weather isn't as easy as it might be cracked up. Ice and snow have packed over the frozen earth and the workmen tried in vain to loosen the surface of the ground. So dynamite will have to be resorted to.

The necessary holes will be made by means of long pipes sunk into the ground at certain intervals. The explosive will be placed in the holes and a fuse attached. With the ground thus loosened the gravediggers will go ahead with the excavation of a hole twelve by twelve by six or eight feet deep. There the old bays who have trotted, raced and walked together through life will be placed side by side.

Hanged Five in One Day.

More men were hanged in Chicago last Friday than suffered death from throwing the Haymarket bomb in the anarchist riots of 1886.

Two murders caused five men to walk to the gallows and drop to their death through the trap, while four were hanged for the Haymarket bomb throwing.

Frank Shiblawski, Ewald Shiblawski, his brother, Philip Sommerfield and Thomas Schultz, slayers of [illegible] W. Guezow, Jr., [illegible] they died while their spiritual adviser was seeking to convince a judge that the four were insane.

The execution of the men, who were hanged in pairs, the Shiblawski brothers first, cut short the plea.

The hanging of Thomas Jennings, a negro, who killed Clarence Hiller while attempting to rob the Hiller home, came after Judge Landis in the United States district court had denied a petition for release on a writ of habeas corpus which set forth that Jennings had been convicted on finger-print evidence which he had been compelled to give the police in violation of his rights.

Judge Landis did not rule on the conspiracy of the evidence, holding that the point, if taken to the Federal courts at all, should have been carried directly to the United States Supreme court from the State Supreme court.

He also declined to consider the affidavit of a photographer that he had been asked by the police to retouch photographs of Jennings' finger prints, and sharply criticized the man who made the affidavit for delaying to make a statement until the trials and appeals were over.

The five hangings caused many to discuss the abolishment of capital punishment in Illinois. Sheriff Zimmer said: "I am not so sure I believe in the wisdom of capital punishment. It is the law and we are here to carry out the law. But it seems to me that imprisonment for life, without hope of commutation or pardon, at hard labor, whose proceeds could be given to the widow, orphans, or other dependents of the victim would be a greater deterrent effect on crime for some time to come," continued the sheriff. "It has been a long time since the extreme penalty has been inflicted. But I believe a better law for the punishment of murder could be made."

Mayor Harrison also declared: "Sometimes I think it would be better to do away with capital punishment and substitute life imprisonment. But the law should make it impossible to escape the prison penalty except on evidence."

A number of lawyers expressed the opinion that the next legislature would face an increased movement looking to the repeal of the capital punishment law.

DON'TS FOR HUSBANDS.

An Appropriate Sequel to the Ten Commandments for Wives.

As the sequel to the ten commandments for wives, the Rev. Albert Marlon Hyde, of the Porter church, Brocton, Mass., gave his congregation ten don'ts for husbands. These are:

Don't forget and leave your little courtesies and gentle kindnesses at some hotel on your wedding trip. You will need them on the remainder of your life journey.

Don't unbosom yourself about your family troubles to your neighbor, your partner, your partner's wife, your stenographer, your college friends member of your club or even a brother or sister in your church. These sacred confidence spread like thistledown and bring forth fruit just as prickly and disagreeable.

Don't arrange for your second marriage before your wife is dead. A strenuous life must not be allowed to encroach too much on your matrimonial affairs.

Don't have nervous prostration when your wife asks you to go out with her for an evening to her musicals or club, or to her friends, or even to a church social. It is hard on a woman to be a grass widow all the time.

Don't make your wife a stranger to you checkbook, although it may be true that she reads most of the other books of the household. It will do her good to read the checkbook, too; she is not a hired servant; she is the partner in the business.

Don't make your wife a pack horse, harnessed to the kitchen stove, washtubs and mending bag. The eight-hour man with the sixteen-hour wife needs to unionize his home.

Don't carry your religion in your wife's name. You will not be able to realize on it here or hereafter.

Don't forget the fact that the decalogue of Moses is still on the statute books. It is intended for husband as well as wife.

Don't forget that the happiest spot on earth is your home. Your wife may not be an angel. You would be lonesome with her if she were. Angels would be hard to live with; wives are much better. Live in the home sunshine and be worthy of it.

BAILEY AGAINST WILSON

A Washington dispatch says: "The real sensation of the week was the statement of Senator J. W. Bailey, of Texas, who declared that he intended going to Texas to fight the Wilson boom. Senator Bailey declared:

"'I am opposed to Wilson because I know if we nominate him we cannot elect him. No man can examine the electoral votes by States without reaching the conclusion that we must carry New York to win. No man who knows anything about politics believes for one moment that Wilson can carry the Empire State. Mr. Bryan can poll more votes there than Wilson, and these same men say that Mr. Bryan can come no nearer carrying New York this year than he did in 1908, when the majority against him was more than 200,000.'

"The Bailey opposition was unexpected by the Wilson men and threw such a scare into them that they brought out the Culberson statement to counteract its effect."

President McCrea Honored.

James McCrea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, has been appointed a member of the American Honorary Committee of the International Congress for the prevention of accidents and industrial hygiene, be held in Milan in May, 1912.

The Pennsylvania Railroad only recently received a medal from the American Museum of Safety for being the American employer to do the most in the past year for the protection of the lives and limbs of its workmen. Serious injuries to employes in its shops were reduced by more than sixty-three per cent from January 1st to November 1st. During this period the average number of shop employes was 33,242.

Notices have been sent out by Dr. William H. Tolman, director of the American Museum of Safety and chairman of the American Committee of the International Congress for the prevention of accidents, announcing the members of the American Committees. The Honorary Committee is composed of: James McCrea, E. A. S. Clarke, George B. Cortelvou, Philip T. Dodge, S. C. Dunham, Elbert H. Gary, John Hays Hammond, A. Barton Hepburn, Seth Low, Charles Nagel and James Speyer.

On the National Committee thirty-eight representatives of various industries and other interests will serve.

Supervisors Were Convicted.

In the Blair county court the suit brought by E. C. Lingenfelter, complainant, against J. B. Malone, H. S. Allison and Grant Snowberger, the supervisors of Freedom township, to recover the statutory penalty of $10 fine for their failure to remove the loose stones from the public highway leading through the township from Newry to Puzzletown, resulted in the jury returning a verdict imposing a fine of $6 and costs of $10 on the defendant supervisors. The principal defense made was that the complainant was moved by spite to prosecute because the supervisors would not appoint his father-in-law, Samuel H. Woomer, to the position of roadmaster. As the upshot of his ligitation the supervisors announced that they would resign in a body.

The complainant citizens professed a willingness to be resigned to the resignation, provided the Puzzletown highway is made traversable for man and beast.

An Epidemic of Coughing.

Is sweeping over the town. Old and young alike are affected, and the strain is particularly hard on little children and on elderly people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a quick, safe and reliable cure for all coughs and colds. Contains no opiates. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

A Hat Trick.

A good hat trick is to take six nickels or one-cent pieces, put them on the table and request some person to select one and hold it tightly in the palm of his hand. After observing its date and making sure that he will recognize it again, this person at your request, puts his hand that holds the coin against his forehead and slowly counts 10. You can say that you desire to have the coin thoroughly magnetized by the person's personality. You have some one throw all of the coins into the hat and shake the hat and place it behind your back without having looked inside of it. As you hold the hat behind you with one hand you pick out and draw from the hat the right coin with the other hand. The heat from the other person's hand has warmed the selected coin and as the other coins are cool it is easy to pick out the right one without looking.—Chicago Record—Herald.

PRISON FOR BIGAMIST

Former Philipsburg Choir Singer Sentenced at Harrisburg.

"Don't send me up, judge. Give me a chance. Let me go this time." said J. Morris Willowby, of Barnesboro, alias James Stephenson, to Judge Kunkle in Harrisburg last week when he was up for sentence after having been convicted of perjury and bigamy. "I'm going to lead a better life," said the Barnesboro man. "I don't know what ever possessed me to get caught in this kind of a scrape."

"You'll have to tell that to somebody else," replied Judge Kunkel, "We don't believe a word you say."

Willowby was sentenced to not less than two years nor more than seven in the penitentiary for bigamy and not more than two years for perjury.

In the court at the time Willowby, or Stephenson, was sentenced were his two wives and a pretty 10-year-old daughter.

Willowby was first married Dec. 10, 1900, in Barnesboro. In 1907 he deserted his family, but was persuaded to return and in 1909 left them finally. He roamed around, going at last to Steelton in 1910, where he met Miss Nellie W. Guisewhite. Several days later they were married. Then he committed perjury, swearing he was unmarried and but 24 years old, whereas he was really 30 years of age.

Mrs. Stephenson—that is the name Willowby took to marry her—suspected something wrong. She wrote to Philipsburg, where Willowby used to be a choir singer, and found that another wife was living there. Then she had him arrested.

"A better man you wouldn't want to see anywhere than he was before he left us," sobbed Mrs. Willowby on the stand.

As Phil Myers, engaged as counsel for the prisoner on the solicitation of his first wife, told how faithful she had been when her husband deserted her, baking bread to sell from door to door in Philipsburg, sustaining the spark of life in her child by other servile labor, Mrs. Willowby fainted away. Sheriff Wells lifted her up bodily and carried her from the room.

At the same time her daughter Catherine broke into tears, and was soothed by Mrs. James Morris Willowby, the second wife. She patted the child's hands and in a few minutes stopped her sobs.

Few Peach Buds Escaped.

Peach buds from the Cumberland valley which State Zoologist H. A. Surface examined at the request of a grower were enough alive to insure fair crop, according to this opinion.

In this one lot, Prof. Surface says were the only specimens examined by him that were not killed by the recent cold weather.

Concluding this reply, the state zoologist, tells growers how they may discover whether or not their peach crops have been injured.

"It is not a difficult matter for peach growers to determine now whether or not their buds are killed," he says. "This is done by cutting open the large round blossom buds, being sure to cut to the center, whether this cut is made by splitting them lengthwise or cutting across. If the bud is alive a very small green thread reaching to the pistil will be seen there in the center in its natural light green color.

"If the bud is injured, the center will be found to be brown or black. It is so easy for a person to determine this for himself, even without the use of a microscope, that each peach grower should examine at least one thousand buds taken from different parts of his own orchard.

"The appearance of a blossom does not mean the setting of fruit. The best time to make a general examination without loss of time, is when the blossoms are open, as one can then quickly go from one tree to another, look into the blossoms and see if the center is green or brown.

"However, practical fruit growers should at this date make examination of their buds and decide whether or not they will have a fair crop from the present prospects. If they find them practically all killed, this is the season to commence to prune back, as you say, in order to produce an abundance of new wood growth this coming summer, which will set fruit buds for the next year's crop.

To Bury Maine Heroes.

Impressive funeral services for the bodies of sailors recovered from the wreck of the battleship Maine and for the remains of the battleship itself have been arranged by the United States and Cuba.

Shortly after March 4, it is expected, the twisted mass which had lain fourteen years in the Havana harbor mud, will be towed out into the gulf of Mexico and sunk. The armored cruiser North Carolina and the scout cruiser Birmingham with the recovered skeletons aboard will convey the Maine to its final resting place.

As the two cruisers take the wreck out into the gulf, the batteries of the North Carolina will roar out a salute of twenty-one guns. The shore batteries of Cuba will answer as the procession steams out to sea.

When deep water is reached, crews will be called to quarters, a funeral march will be played, three volleys will be fired and as all that is left of the old Maine disappears a bugler will sound taps.

One Thing She Could Do For Him.

One Saturday afternoon recently a frail little man started to cross Broadway at Forty-second street just when all sorts of fast moving vehicles were whirling their matinee patrons up Broadway. At the same instant a very fleshy lady started from the curb directly opposite with the same purpose in mind.

By remarkable luck both succeeded in escaping the passing wheels; but, as fate would have it, the little man, whose eyes were busy ogling the traffic on either side of him, darted plump into the oncoming woman at the middle of the street. The result was a sickening collision, with the little man down and out.

"You should have looked where you were going," said the fleshy woman bending over the victim on the curb to which he had been carried by a traffic policeman. "But is there anything I can do for you?"

"Yes," he replied faintly, opening his eyes a moment. "Get the number of the automobile that struck me."—Lippincott's.

Holy Lands of All Religions.

Christians call Palestine the Holy Land because it was the birthplace of the Christian religion on earth as well as that of the Saviour, whose birth, ministry and death are inseparably associated with the history of Jerusalem and vicinity. To the Mohammedans Mecca, in Arabia, is the holy land, it being the birthplace of Mohammed, the saviour of the followers of that faith.

India is the holy land of the Chinese and other oriental Buddhists, it being the native land of Sakya Nuni, the supreme Buddha. Elis, one of the several divisions of the ancient Peloponnesus, was the Mecca and the Jerusalem of the ancient Greeks. The temple of Olympus Zeus was situated at Elis, and the sacred festivals were held there each year. With Achaia it is at present a part of Greece. The believers in the Sinto religion make annual pilgrimage to Sitsa Kara, the immense stone pillar where their supreme ruler last stood while talking to men.—New York World.

Sealing a Mine.

The brilliancy of the clear autumn night was dimming in the first faint light of the dawn when the work of sealing the shafts began. Up into the cloudless sky, through the tangled steel work of the tipple, a tall tower of black smoke 300 feet high poured up into the still air and faded into the dawn. In two hours the black pits were covered, first with a layer of rails, and then on this was laid a solid bed of concrete, and two hours later only a few thin wisps of smoke that poured up through cracks along the edges of the great seal, like steam beneath the lid of a teakettle, told of the inferno that was seething in the mine 400 feet below. With the air cut off and the shaft sealed the fire could live only so long as sufficient oxygen remained to feed the flames.—Atlantic Monthly.

When the Super Is Known.

A risky uncertainty in one night stands is the super. In smaller places he works until 6 o'clock in the evening, peacefully partakes of his supper and presents himself at the stage door at 7. This leaves a very brief time for his drill. The mysteries of makeup have not been solved by him, and worst of all, every inhabitant knows him.

"Once," as Lawrence Marston tells it, "we were doing 'Richard III.' It was a one night stand, with raw supers. All went well until the moment when the bearers, with King Edward's body on a stretcher, emerged from the wings.

"'Set down, set down your honorable load,' began Queen Anne.

"'An' do it aisy, Moike O'Brien,' called a voice from the gallery."—New York Tribune.

Damascus Olive Groves.

There is an ancient custom under which the olive groves around Damascus are guarded by official watchmen to prevent the trees being stripped by thieves. But on a certain date the governor or some magistrate issues a proclamation warning all owners of olive trees that they must pick their fruit, for after a certain date it becomes public property. If a farmer has his crop only half gathered when that date arrives the public will gather it for him.

An Extreme Case.

"What was the trouble between Swinton and his wife? Was it his fault or hers that they were unable to get along together?"

"It's rather hard to decide. It appears that whenever one of them had an irresistible impulse the other had an unalterable objection."—Chicago Record-Herald.

How He Got Her.

"The psychological moment counts for much in a love affair."

Hereditary.

"H'm!" replied her husband grumpily. "Hereditary. That's what I did when I proposed."

Carlyle's Sneer at Gladstone.

J. E. Boehm, the sculptor, once met Gladstone at a country house and was immensely impressed by the extent and diversity of the statesman's knowledge as revealed in his conversation. Boehm was still full of the subject when the morning arrived for Carlyle's sitting for a bust, and to the philosopher the sculptor poured forth his admiration for Gladstone's intimate acquaintance with subjects so far apart as gardening and Greek. Carlyle listened for a time in scornful silence; then he said, "And what did he say about your work?" "Oh, nothing," said Boehm. "He doesn't know anything about sculpture." "Of course," growled Carlyle, "of course, and he showed his knowledge about things that you didn't understand. No doubt if you asked Blackie he'd say that Gladstone knew nothing about Greek, and the gardener would tell you that he knew nothing whatever of gardening."

Inn Names In Germany.

Germany probably holds the record for out of the way signs and fantastic inn names. The most absurd results are usually obtained by the name of some animal with a more or less unsuitable object. The Comfortable Chicken and the Cold Frog, both of them in Berlin, are certainly left in the shade by the Angry Ant (Ort, in Westphalia) and the Stiff Dog (Berlin). The Lame Louse is an inn in a suburb of Berlin, and not far from it is the Thirsty Pelican. The Dirty Parlor, the Bloody Bones, the Musical Cats, the Fourhundredweight Man, and the Boxers' Den are all in Berlin or the neighborhood, and the Old Straw Bag in Leipzig. The Open Banghole is in Stadtohen, in the Palatinate, and the Shoulder Blade in Jerichow. The Last Tear is a landlord's notion for the name of his inn, situated near a graveyard, visited by returning mourners, and is of frequent occurrence throughout the fatherland.

A Strange Colony.

The Colonia Cosme, on the Paraguay above Asuncion, is one of the most curious in the world. The members of the colony make or grow everything they want and import nothing. The workmen have seven hours' work a day and earn, not money, but time. Their wages are hours and half hours. These they sometimes save up till they have a week in hand and then go off on an excursion. If a man wants a chair or table he pays for it in hours of work, which are deducted from the balance to his credit. Three men went off up the river in a canoe for a three weeks' holiday. They sold their canoe at Asuncion for a pound and came home overland in ten days, lodged in the best houses in the villages on the way and yet had some money in hand at the end.—London Spectator.

Dogs In Ecclesiastical Decorations.

The stained glass representation of the "Peddler and His Dog" was removed from Lambeth church a quarter of a century ago owing to the alleged incongruity of introducing the figure of a dog in a church window. Quite recently Chancellor Prescott of Carlisle refused a faculty for a stained glass window in a Westmorland church because the design included a dog, and perhaps the only existing examples of dogs used for ecclesiastical decorations are to be found in Lord Brownlow's private chapel at Ashbridge. In this church one stained glass window depicts Tobias and Sara in bed and a dog sleeping on the quilt, while in another window Job is shown being mocked by three men, one of whom is holding a dog by a chain.—Westminster Gazette.

The Giant's Staircase.

One of the most widely known geological curiosities in the vicinity of Cork is a series of knobs or knots projecting from the face of a cliff. There are sixteen of these huge projections all together, all regularly set in the face of the cliff, one above the other, forming a series of such uniformity as to give it the general appearance of a stairway. Since time out of memory this queer ascent and its projecting "steps" have been known as the Giant's Staircase.

The Emperor's Bell.

One of the biggest bells in the world is in Cologne cathedral and is known as the "Gloriosa." It was cast from twenty-two French cannon captured in the Franco-Prussian war and was presented to the cathedral by the kaiser. It bears the German arms and two inscriptions. One, in Latin, expresses the emperor's gratitude for the divine mercy in granting him victory. The other, in German, declares: "I am the emperor's bell, and I proclaim his glory. I fill a sacred post, and I pray heaven to grant peace and prosperity to the German empire."

Wanted to Patent a Circus.

P. T. Barnum once came to the office to know if he could patent the three ring circus. In technical parlance his three ring circus was an aggregation and not a combination to produce a new result. Therefore it was not patentable, which information highly incensed the showman. "It will be adopted by every circus just as soon as I make it known," he declared. And it was.—Scientific American.

A Thrifty Spouse.

A man whose illness threatened to develop into typhoid was taken to the hospital. Instead of growing worse he improved, and at the end of the fourth day, when his wife visited him, he asked to be taken home.

"But you have paid for a week," replied his thrifty spouse. "They won't refund the money. You had better stay your week out."—New York Herald.

The Modern Way.

Here is a story of the success of two young men who went from the city to North Dakota. Each had about $15,000 of which $8,000 was put into machinery. This provided them with two powerful traction engines, and the necessary equipment of farming machinery. Operations were begun with breaking the raw land in March, 1911; by November of the same year the young city-farmers had marketed $60,000 worth of flaxseed, which was hauled 40 miles to the nearest railroad station. The entire undertaking was managed on modern lines: A day's plowing with each engine was estimated at 25 acres, but when the crew by saving time turned 30 acres in one day, they were given a bonus of $5. Thereupon 30 acres per day became the usual thing. The same broad-gauge, liberal policy characterized the whole undertaking. The most competent men obtainable were hired and well paid; the aim being to do the largest amount of work that could be done well, in a day, and pay accordingly. Neither of these young men had ever raised any flax, but they went to the agricultural station and thoroughly posted themselves. This was a success which could not have been obtained with mere ability, willingnsss and a pair of hands; it required capital, yet it was brain and initiative which won; for not only was the crop itself highly profitable but the land advanced in value in that one season more than the entire expenditure for machinery.

In these days the really successful farmer must possess brains and machinery.—Popular Mechanics.

He is survived by his widow, four small children and the following brothers and sisters: John, Patton; George, West Virginia; Isaac, Steubenville, O.; Mrs. John Haywood, Hawk Run, and Mrs. Samuel Sparry, and Mrs. William Turnbull, Patton.

Spider Racing.

Lord Devon's property was greatly impoverished by the twelfth earl, who squandered nearly all his fortune and terribly embarrassed the entailed property. He was addicted to a most peculiar form of gambling, namely, spider racing, which he played with the last Marquis of Hastings and the eighth Duke of Bedford. Each player selected a spider, which was placed on the table, and then the latter was gently heated from underneath. The warmth caused the insects to run, and the spider which got to the edge first won. But spiders are curious creatures, and it would frequently happen that a spider which was near the edge and looked like winning would double back, traverse the table in all directions and lose its backer the thousands of pounds so nearly won. Lord Devon, Lord Hastings and the Duke of Bedford each of them squandered enormous sums on this game, which contributed in no small degree to the ruin of the two former.—New York Tribune.

Far be it from us to "butt in," but why not put up Associate Judge Jim. Cornelly for Democratic national delegate from this district?

Democratic County Chairman Kimport has formally announced his candidacy for re-election. It would seem that he throws down the challenge to the regular Democrats in Centre County to put up one of their own against him or get off the map.

Since the Democratic Board of County Commissioners is unwilling to spend sufficient money to publish in this newspaper the formal announcement of the holding of the primary election for this year, we will help out a little and explain for the information of the public that the primaries will be held on Saturday, April 13.

Thus far Messrs. Beezer and Foster have not indicated whether they will stand with the regular Democrats or with the reorganizers—or with both. Each is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Legislature, but as to how they stand on the great question of reorganizing their party in Pennsylvania both are eloquently silent.

A LOSS TO EDUCATION.

Every friend of education will learn with keen regret of the death of Dr. Flickinger, the capable, cultured, gentlemanly principal of the Lock Haven State Normal School. His passing away means not only a loss to that well known and rapidly growing school, but it means that the cause of education has been deprived of one of its best and most successful champions. For what he was, for what he accomplished and for the good he did for countless others, Dr. Flickinger will long live in the affectionate memory of a legion of admiring friends.

THE CONGRESSIONAL SITUATION.

For a long time the voters of Clearfield county considered the candidacy of William T. DeHass as a joke and in fact Mr. Patton's friends thought nothing of it. It now appears from announcements made in the Republican newspapers that "Billy" is serious and wants to go to Congress. As a matter of equity he is not entitled to the place at this time, as the present incumbent, Hon. Chas. Patton, has made a creditable representative and should be returned for another term. He has made a few enemies because of his fearlessness in doing what he believed to be right, as against a few who had plums to gather, and whose absolute selfishness overcome their charitable judgment.

It was unfortunate for Mr. Patton that his predecessor had not filled the appointments as they came due and saved his successor from this embarrassing task upon assuming the duties of the office. Finding these responsibilities facing him he met them as best he could and must be given credit for his fairness and judgment displayed in every selection. Some aspirants had to be disappointed and because the other fellow was chosen then some got mad, are seeking revenge in the coming primary election.

The voters of the 21st. Congressional District still have some sense and are not going to be led into a trap by the defeated candidates for postmaster at some of the principal places in the district. Mr. Patton had earned a second term which is not only right, but the prevailing custom in the district. He belongs to a representative family, all of whom have made good in their service in public life. Mr. DeHass is a young man just having retired from a second term of a good County office and has no claims whatever upon the congressional apple this year.

When Mr. Patton completes his second term and Centre county shall have represented the district for her two terms, then this paper will be uncompromisingly for William T. DeHass as it will, then be his turn, and we think that Mr. DeHass is now only sparring for second place so that he may have stronger claims when his turn arrives. He then will be a young man and with paramount claims may ride in on the popular wave, but for the present his claims are of the most meagre and flimsy kind and he should retire gracefully from the field and help make Hon. Chas. Patton his own successor.

SCHOOL RAISED FLAG

Interesting Exercises on Lincoln's Birthday at Mt. Vernon.

Lincoln's Birthday, Monday the 12th, was a "Red Letter Day" for the Mt. Vernon school, for at that time and under the direction of the P. O. S. of A., a flag pole given by Benjamin Crane was erected and "Old Glory" was flung to the breeze, making the fifth flag to float over as many school houses in Taylor township.

The school had prepared special "Flag Exercises," with music and recitations for the occasion, and all the pupils did so well that they deserve special mention. After the opening exercises and greeting, the "Order" and school marched to the school ground and all united in singing the "Red White and Blue" as Henry Yingling, an old veteran, swung the "Stars and Stripes" to the breeze, amid the cheers of the spectators. The school exercises were then continued, with addresses from the gentlemen and phonograph selections by John Ayres.

The many patrons and friends of the school, who were present on this occasion, give much praise to this patriotic teacher, Laura F. Bechdel, who has been instrumental in causing three of the five flags to be raised in this township, and wish her all the success she deserves in her chosen profession.

"Brother Jonathan."

The origin of the term "Brother Jonathan" as applied to the United States is as follows: When General Washington, after being appointed commander of the army of the Revolutionary war, went to Massachusetts to organize it he found a great want of ammunition and other means of defense, and on one occasion it seemed that no means could be devised for the necessary safety.

Jonathan Trumbull, the elder, was the governor of the state of Connecticut, and the general, placing the greatest reliance on his excellency's judgment, remarked, "We must consult Brother Jonathan on the subject." The general did so, and the governor was successful in supplying many of the wants of the army. Thenceforward when difficulties arose and the army was spread over the country it became a byphrase, "We must consult Brother Jonathan," and the name has now become a designation for the whole country as John Bull has for England —C. C. Bombaugh, "Gleanings For the Curious."

First International Band Contest.

The earliest record of an international band contest is of one held in the year 1720 between the bands of Handel and Buononcini, a gifted Italian composer, who by his friends and admirers was declared to be infinitely superior to the German master. The king headed the partisans of the German and the Prince of Wales those of the Italian artist. The controversy has been perpetuated in the lines of John Byron, a popular poet of his day:

Some say, compared to Buononcini,
That Mynheer Handel's but a ninny.
Others aver that he to Handel
Is scarcely fit to hold a candle.
Strange all this difference should be
'Twixt tweedledum and tweedledee.

An international band contest on a much larger scale was held in connection with the Paris exhibition of 1867 in which selected bands from Austria, Bavaria, Baden, Belgium, France, Holland, Spain and Russia competed in the presence of 30,000 visitors. Russia took the first prize, closely followed by France and Austria.—London Standard.

Breakfast Table Scrap.

Burdine Butler, whose home is near Howard, is again "going to law." Burdine has been "going to law" so many times and so frequently that an announcement that he was once more trying it would cut little figure, ordinarily. This time, however, all the surrounding neighborhood is interested, for Burdine's latest lawsuit is the result of a breakfast table scrap in which he and his brother-in-law, William McCaleb, were the participants. The fact that Burdine was pretty badly done up and that McCaleb is made the defendant in the case would seem to indicate which one got the better of the other in the lively clash. Reports differ as to what precipitated the scrap, but they all agree pretty well that the breakfast was ruined and that dishes and furniture fared none too well. For a time neighbors thought that Burdine had concluded to be content with his list of injuries, and for once not resort to the law, but he finally went before Justice of the Peace George W. Eaton, in Blanchard, and made information against McCaleb, who was charged with assault and battery and other things. Incidentally, Burdine alleged that McCaleb had been the aggressor. A hearing was scheduled for Saturday afternoon, but Burdine was too busy to appear. Just what the next development will be nobody in the vicinity of Howard attempts to predict.

On Wednesday of last week the Ladies' Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Presbyterian church, held a very interesting meeting at the home of Miss Blanche Kunes. After conducting devotional services the Home Society discussed "The Indians," while the Foreign Society took as a subject, "Korea." A highly gratifying feature of the meeting was the enrollment of five additional ladies as members of the joint societies. After the business meeting, Miss Kunes served very delicious refreshments.

"Dick" Quigley and several friends had a narrow escape from possible serious injury several evenings ago. He was bringing Thomas and Warren Wynn and Charley Strayer home from Lock Haven in his Thomas car, when the machine skidded while making a sharp turn at the cross roads below the Pennsylvania fire brick works. The rear end of the car swerved and struck a guy pole by the roadside. Fortunately all four occupants of the car escaped injury. The car was somewhat battered up but not damaged to any great extent.

Best Lime and Sulfur Formula.

Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, is often asked to explain the difference between the old formula of 17-22-50, in preparing a lime and sulfur solution for spraying fruit trees, and the concentrated method of using one pound of lime, and two pounds of sulfur to each gallon of water.

A correspondent in the city of Reading wrote that he had good results with the old formula, except that when the solution is left standing over night there is difficulty in straining it. Professor Surface, in replying to the letter, gave the following advice:

"Replying to your letter concerning making the lime-sulfur solution, I beg to say that the correct formula calls for two pounds of ground or powdered sulfur of any kind, and one pound of good, fresh lime, in one gallon of water, boiled for one hour. If you let it settle you do not need to strain it, as there is no sediment in the clear red liqnid. If you do not take the time to let it settle, it should be strained.

"The advantage of this over the 17-22-50 solution is that it is storable without crystallization. You can make it and keep it as many years as you want it. Also, there is nowhere near as much sediment to contend with. This formula gets rid of nearly all of the sediment, especially if you will let it settle, and remove the liquid, and store this clear, red liquid only, and this does not crystallize.

"It is much better to use some lime or some of the sediment in the material at the time you desire to do the spraying, in order that it will act as a marker, and you can see where it was applied, as you suggest. It is a good plan to have at hand a barrel in which you can keep the sediment separate, and stir and strain it, and add it to the tank of liquid when you are ready to spray, or stir in a few pounds of lime to the spray liquid, when when you are ready to use it. If you do not use something of this kind as a marker, you must simply do as good a job of spraying as possible when the wind is blowing slightly, being sure to cover all the one side of the tree at one time. Then when the wind changes, direct the spray liquid to the other side, and spray the opposite side thoroughly."

Dogs Chasing Deer.

On Saturday dogs chased a large doe into the fields of George Carper near the Spruce Creek club house, and in making an effort to get away the deer broke its back. Mr. Carper and several men went to the field and put the animal out of its misery, and immediately shot the dogs that caused the trouble. This is the fourth or fifth doe that has been killed by the dogs in that community. The deer that was killed last Saturday was dressed and sent to the Huntingdon hospital. On Saturday afternoon the railroad men running between Tyrone and Lock Haven saw a good sized doe down the valley.

Cupid Enmeshes Shakers.

Cupid has at last invaded the ranks of the Shakers, whose belief for a century has been against matrimony. Elder Peter Stephens and Eldress Sarah Smith, for years prominent members of the Shaker colony at Whitewater, Ohio, recently were married. The ceremony was secret, but the matter leaked out at Union Village, a Shaker settlement. This and several other like marriages have caused a sensation among the Shakers of various Ohio colonies.

IN EMPIRE STYLE.

A Frock That Imitates Two Piece Suit.

FROCK OF RESEDA GREEN BROADCLOTH.

This dainty costume of reseda green broadcloth, which is braided in the same color, appears to be a smart suit worn over a lace blouse, but the "blouse" is merely a yoke and jabot of cream lace set into the bodice, and a circular hip tunic gives the coat effect.

The Shirt Waist Question.

Many girls and women make their own shirt waists, a task comparatively easy after one has a pattern that is perfectly adapted to her individual idiosyncrasies. One young woman used to have a waist made by the most famous shirt waist maker in the city. She took it home, ripped it apart, cut an exact pattern of it and made her summer waists by the pattern. Her waists always fitted her well, but there were some attendant trouble and expense.

A contributor in Harper's Bazar tells her plan. She bought a plain pattern and some cheap madras, cut and carefully fitted a waist, ripped it apart—it was only basted, of course—and recut her pattern by it. Then she had a pattern to which she could apply tucks, embroidery or lace at her pleasure, doing this before cutting the goods.

The New Neckwear.

This collar and cuff set represents the latest vogue in lingerie effects for neck and sleeves. They are of fillet net darned with wool. The wool stitches may be either in self color or in shades harmonizing with the waist with which the set is worn. Bands of lingerie are applied about the edge of the collar and cuffs.

Fragrant Sachet Perfume.

This calls for two ounces of fresh lavender flowers, one-half ounce of Florentine iris, one ounce of bruised rosemary leaves, ten grains of musk and ten drops of attar of roses. Mix together, make sachets and place in drawers among your clothes.

HE HAD HIS HAIR CUT.

And It Took a Long, Long Time to Find Out by Whom.

One of the most elaborate and sustained practical jokes on record was that played on J. M. Langford—commonly known as "Joe"—some fifty years ago. According to the version given in the "Life of Sir William Russell," Langford was in the Garrick club in London when Albert Smith accosted him: "Hello, Joe! Who has cut your hair?" Joe was in a dignified mood and resented the query. "I really don't see," he replied, "how it can interest you who cut my hair." Smith went downstairs and stood in the hall. The next member who came up to the morning room sauntered up to Langford with: "I see you've been having your hair cut. Who did it?" Joe very sternly replied, "I can't imagine why you ask me." Then he ordered a glass of sherry and bitters. The waiter brought it and gave a little start of surprise as he presented it with a "Beg pardon, sir! It's along of your 'air, sir; it looks unusual." Joe went to the glass and saw nothing remarkable, but as he was considering his face Charles burst upon him with, "Where on earth did you get your hair cut, my dear Joe?"

Joe could stand it no longer. He went off to his chambers in Raymond's buildings, Gray's inn. Next day he saw an advertisement in the Times: "J. M. L.—Say, who cut it? Was it your own hand or the deed of another? Confess ere it be too late." It was only the first of a series of similar announcements, and the ingenuity of his tormentors devised continual surprises for him. On the day he went down to Chertsey races he saw the walls placarded with enormous posters, yellow and black: "J. M. L.—Once more, who cut it? You must speak!" A band of Ethiopian minstrels was furnished with a melody to sing outside Raymond's buildings to the air of "What Are the Wild Waves Saying?" then very popular. And the refrain was:

What are dem wild waves saying? Dey say, Who cut Joe's hair?

In despair, Langford went abroad, and when, at Chamonix, he climbed to the Cascade des Pelerins he found plastered in front of him a huge yellow poster bearing the words: "J. M. L.—Confess, reveal, or be forever lost! Who cut it?" Joe's spirit was broken. He sat down and wrote a humble letter to Albert Smith: "I yield. Spare me. My hair was cut in St. Martin's court at the barber's on the left hand side. His charge was threepence. I am quite beaten."

Her Opportunity.

In an old French joke book is a story to the effect that when at Rome public penances were customary a confessor thought fit to order that one of his female penitents should be flogged. She told her husband, and he volunteered to undergo the penance for her. The wife was present at the flogging, and whenever the confessor's energies flagged she would cry:

"Flog harder, father, for you know I'm a great sinner!"

A Surprise For Horace Greeley.

In the early days of the suffragist movement Miss Susan B. Anthony had no more bitter opponent than Horace Greeley. It was for a long time his custom to wind up all debates with the conclusive remark, "The best women I know do not want to vote."

When the New York constitution was being altered in 1867 Miss Anthony laid a train for him. She wrote to Mrs. Greeley and persuaded the editor's wife not only to sign a petition for woman's suffrage herself, but to circulate the paper and get 300 signatures among her acquaintances. In the committee Mr. Greeley, who was chairman, had listened to the debate and prepared to introduce to the convention an adverse report. He was just about to utter his usual "settler" when George William Curtis rose.

"Mr. Chairman," said he, "I hold in my hand a petition for suffrage signed by 300 women of Westchester, headed by Mrs. Horace Greeley."

The chairman's embarrassment could hardly be controlled. He had found at least one of "the best women I know" wanted to vote, but he revenged himself later upon the leaders by scathing editorials.

One of Curran's Witticisms.

Curran once had as colleague in a case a remarkably tall and slender man, who had originally intended to take holy orders. When the judge observed that the case involved a question in ecclesiastical law, Curran said, "I can refer your lordship to the high authority behind me, who was once intended for the church, though in my opinion he is fitter for the steeple."

A Comedy of Errors.

When Baron Haussmann went to Constantinople on a visit to Abdul Aziz, who was then sultan, he had an interview with the grand vizier, who did not know a word of French. At the beginning of the interview the old long Turkish pipes were brought in, and then Baron Haussmann began making a very long speech in French. The grand vizier could not understand a word, but listened most attentively till he noticed that his pipe had gone out and clapped his hand for a servant to come and relight it. Haussmann, thinking he was applauding, rushed toward him with outstretched hand, intending to shake hands and thank him. The grand vizier, seeing his hand put forth, shook it warmly and said "Goodby," under the impression it was Haussmann's intention to leave, and quitted the room.

CHIC LACE TUNIC.

Smart Overdress of Irish and Chantilly.

OVERDRESS OF IRISH AND CHANTILLY LACES.

An overdress of lace is a modish and economical investment, as it may be worn on a number of occasions with a change of silk slip, thus practically bringing about an entirely new effect in one's costume.

Sewing by System.

A business girl claims to have solved the sewing question for business women by a little plan of her own. Everybody knows how many times one might put in fifteen or twenty minutes, or even half an hour, sewing, if only the work were "handy." But the time would be largely spent getting things together, so no effort is made.

This girl condenses her sewing room into two pasteboard boxes. One contains materials and patterns and a smaller box holding thread, needle case, scissors, thimble, etc. A garment is cut out and laid in box No. 2, with the trimmings, etc., to be used in making it up. It is but a moment's work to get out the part of the garment on which one is working; all the implements are at hand, and it is surprising how much [illegible] made in a few spare moments.

Ideal Outing Hat.

Though genuine panama hats are rather expensive, they pay for themselves many times over, for they are so delightfully cool and light, they may be bent into any desired shape, are not injured by dampness and at the end of the season can be reblocked to meet any new style requirements. The panama hat illustrated is ideal for wear during the early fall days in the mountains and is simply trimmed with white ribbon.

New Waltz Popular In Resorts.

"The Sleepy Love" waltz is the newest thing in the fashionable seashore resorts. It was originated recently by the National Academy of Dancing in Paris and imported quickly for the entertainment of the young persons who crowd the seashore hotels. It is danced to waltz time, but the music is slow—a sort of lullaby. It was tried in Atlantic City and became popular immediately. In Long Branch, Seabright and on Long Beach it has been taken up, and the young folk are having much fun trying to learn the odd steps. The orchestras find it difficult to get the time accurate, but once the dancers get the spirit of the music they are able to dance the new step without difficulty.

Duchess of Roxburghe's Emeralds.

The Duchess of Roxburghe has added another great emerald to her wonderful collection. The emerald, which is mounted in a circle of diamonds, was carried to London by an oriental potentate who went there for the coronation.

The duchess has the finest collection of emeralds known with the exception of that of the German empress. Included in her collection are two necklaces of cut emeralds and two ropes of cabochon emeralds of great size, a tiara of diamonds and emeralds and a stomacher of diamonds and emeralds.

Origin of Plum Duff.

This is the origin of plum duff, according to the captain of an Atlantic liner:

"One Christmas day, hundreds of years ago at sea, a ship in a storm was swept by a comber that carried off her cook, her crate of chickens, her turkeys—in a word, the whole raw material of her Christmas dinner.

"But the sailors were determined to have at least some sort of Christmas pudding. They knew nothing about cooking, and they drew lots for their new cook. The lot fell to the boatswain's mate.

"This chap fished up a cookbook from the bottom of his sea chest. He ran over the pudding recipes and chose one that began:

"'Make a stiff dough.'

"He made a pudding after this recipe. It was stuffed with Malaga raisins and covered with a rich sauce. The men were delighted.

"'Put a name to it,' they said. 'Put a name to it.'

"And the boatswain's mate, knowing that 'r-o-u-g-h' was pronounced 'rough' and thinking 'd-o-u-g-h' followed the same rule, answered readily:

"'It's called duff, mates.'"

Settled the Sacristan.

A matter of fact sacristan of the Cathedral of Berlin once wrote the king of Prussia this brief note:

Sire—I acquaint your majesty, first, that there are wanting books of psalms for the royal family. I acquaint your majesty, second, that there wants wood to warm the royal seats. I acquaint your majesty, third, that the balustrade next the river, behind the church, is become ruinous.

SCHMIDT,
Sacrist of the Cathedral.

The reply of the king was not that of a "gracious majesty." Its stiff formality in imitating the style of the sacristan probably was not taken by the receiver as complimentary to him:

I acquaint you, Herr Sacrist Schmidt, first, that those who want to sing may buy books. Second, I acquaint Herr Sacrist Schmidt that those who want to be warm must buy wood. Third, I acquaint Herr Sacrist Schmidt that I shall not trust any longer to the balustrade next the river. And I acquaint Herr Sacrist Schmidt, fourth, that I will not have any more correspondence with him.

FREDERICK.

The Shillalah.

The shillalah is no raw limb of a tree. It is almost as much a work of art as a well balanced cricket bat. The old shillalahs were as carefully looked after by their loving owners as is a rifle in the wilds. Cut from the sturdiest of young blackthorns and showing as little taper as an ebony ruler, it was weighed with lead or iron at the end nearest the grip so that its center of gravity was about four-fifths of the way from the hitting end. When properly seasoned by being kept in the neighborhood of the farm oven for a few months it became a thing of supple steel. And the proper pronunciation of the name of this fearsome weapon is the melodious one of "shill-aily," with the accent on the "ail."—London Chronicle.

Her Queer Question.

The rector of a country parish in England having sent blankets, gorceries, coals and some of the good things usual at Christmas to an old parishioner a lady expatiated warmly to him on the reverend gentleman's kindness.

"Don't you think," she asked the old villager, "that it is very good of the rector to look after you like this and send you all these nice things?"

"Good of him!" exclaimed the old man in blank amazement. "Why, what's he for?"—Pearson's Weekly.

A Slap at Whistler.

A young San Franciscan, the owner of a large and valuable collection of autographs, once wrote to James McNeill Whistler, politely requesting his signature. The letter was sent in care of the London Royal academy, with which the famous American painter was at outs. After four months the letter was returned to the San Francisco address from the dead letter office in Washington. Covering the envelope was the word, repeated numberless times, "Unknown."

Boston Could Stand It.

Ralph Waldo Emerson once made a crushing reply to a man who asked him whether the people in Boston did not feel alarmed. Said Emerson, "What about?" Said the man, "Why, the world is coming to an end next Monday." Emerson replied: "I'm glad of it. We can get along a great deal better without it."

Pleasant.

The Host's Youngest—Don't your shoes feel very uncomfortable when you walk, Mrs. Nuryche? Mrs. Nuryche—Dear me! What an extraordinary question! Why do you ask, child? The Host's Youngest—Oh, only cos pa said the other day since you'd come into your money you'd got far too big for your boots.

Good Reason.

"I wouldn't be in Brown's shoes just now."

"Why not?"

"He left them in the cellar, and they dumped four tons of coal on them before Brown was up."

A Long Swallow.

"And you give the giraffe only one lump of sugar?" asked the little boy at the zoo.

"Oh, yes!" replied the keeper. "One lump goes a long way with him."—Yonkers Statesman.

Power of Nature's Beauty.

Have you never felt the marvelous power of beauty in nature? If not you have missed one of the most exquisite joys in life, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. I was once going through the Yosemite valley, and after riding 100 miles in a stagecoach over rough mountain roads I was so completely exhausted that it did not seem as though I could keep my seat while we traveled over the ten more miles which would bring us to our destination. But on looking down from the top of the mountain I caught a glimpse of the celebrated Yosemite falls and the surrounding scenery just as the sun broke through the clouds, and there was revealed a picture of such rare beauty and marvelous picturesqueness that every particle of fatigue, brain fag and muscle weariness departed in an instant. My whole soul thrilled with a winged sense of sublimity, grandeur and beauty which I had never experienced before and which I can never forget. I felt a spiritual uplift which brought tears of joy to my eyes.

A Delayed Execution.

An eighteenth century execution on Kennington common was stopped for a time owing to a strange cause. On Aug. 19, 1763, two days before the date of the execution, a heavy fog came over London, accompanied by thunder and lightning and torrents of rain. These conditions lasted for nearly forty-eight hours, and many people believed that the last day had arrived. When the time fixed for the execution arrived the assembled crowd cried shame on the sheriff for hanging a man when the world was coming to an end. As he persisted in his preparations they burst through the barriers and stopped the proceedings, shouting that the culprit might as well wait a few minutes, when the grand summons would come to all. The sheriff had to obtain the assistance of a force of soldiers before the execution could be carried out.

Mixed Emotions.

A Bostonian tells of a clean, well set up young Irishman who formerly saw service in the British navy, but who is now engaged in business at the Hub.

"When are you going to get freedom in Ireland, John?" the Bostonian once idly asked.

"The only way that we'll get freedom in ould Ireland," said the Celt, "will be if France an' Russia an' Germany an' Austria an' maybe Italy—if they would all join together to give those blackguards of English a rare ould batin'. That's the only way, sir, we'll get home rule."

Then as he looked cautiously about a twinkle of cunning was added to his expression. "An' the whole lot of 'em together couldn't do it, sir. Oh, it's the grand navy we've got!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Talmud.

The Talmud is the compendium of ancient Jewish oral, or unwritten, law, as distinguished from the Pentateuch, or written, law. Its origin is coeval with the return of the Jewish people from the Babylonian captivity, 536 B. C. Its compilation in Hebrew was begun by the scribes, and by their successors the work was carried on till 220 B. C. The Talmud is a combination of prose and poetry and contains two elements, legal and legendary. Its morality resembles that of the New Testament, and its philosophy reminds us very forcibly of that of the great Plato.—New York American.

A Fresh Egg.

An English food expert, said in a recent lecture:

"The secret of health is two meals a day with an occasional fast. But people won't avail themselves of this superb secret. It is too unpleasant—like the fresh egg. A gentleman, after cutting the top off a soft boiled egg, summoned the waiter and said:

"'Waiter, take this egg back to the kitchen, wring its neck, and grill it for me.'"

Thought It Was a Joke.

The Colonel—And you actually assert that you want to marry my daughter? Fusby—Y-yes. The Colonel (staring at him unpleasantly)—You know I am English. Fusby—Y-yes, sir. The Colonel—Well, it's going to take me several years to see the point of your little joke. Good day to you.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Best Asleep.

"I don't feel well," said one clerk to another as he took off his coat in the office. "The trouble with me is that I haven't slept as I ought. I don't feel well unless I've slept." "That's the same way with me," said his colleague. "In fact, I think I feel best of all when I'm sound asleep!"

The Haughty Cook.

"My dear, will you kindly ask that haughty cook of ours to stew some tripe I brought home? I haven't the nerve."

"Where is the tripe?"

"She's looking at it now through her lorgnette." — Spokane Spokesman-Review.

The Very Idea!

Mr. Woggs—I'm through with Bump. I told him we are going to name our baby after some great personage and asked him for a suggestion. Mrs. Woggs—What did he say? Mr. Woggs—He said, "Name it after ours."—Puck.

How Could He?

Aunt—You will never learn how to manager your money, Karl. Nephew—Can you wonder at it, auntie? My acquaintance with it is always so short.—Fliegende Blatter.

Queered His Grandfather.

Peter Augustus had a foolish, fond old grandfather. The grandfather was boasting to a visitor one day, as grandfathers will, about the family he had raised.

"My daughter Martha is a fine young woman," he said, "and her little boy, Peter Augustus, is a fine lad. But the finest thing about that pair is the affection that exists between them. They never exchange a cross word. They're more like two young lovers than mother and son. It's beautiful to see them together. Hold on a minute, and I'll call Peter Augustus in. Then his mother will come down, and you can see their relations for yourself."

The old man rose and ambled heavily to the door. There was a beatific smile on his old face. Little Peter Augustus was playing with the cat in the garden.

"Peter Augustus!" he shouted. "Peter Augustus! Your mother wants you!"

The little boy dropped the cat and fixed a searching glance on his grandfather.

"Your mother wants you, Peter Augustus!"

"Does she want to warm me?" Peter Augustus cautiously demanded.

Really Worth While.

Eben Pratt of Marshby had sent two sons to Boston and knew he had reason to be proud of them. One day a summer visitor lingering in Mr. Pratt's grocery, provision and dry goods establishment mentioned some of the shining lights who had made themselves remembered in and near Boston and others still to be found there.

"We've had a good many smart men and women in and around our city," said the visitor, "and there are a number of them left. We've got scientific men and writers and artists and musicians and"—

Mr. Pratt's dry voice broke in on the list. "If ye call those folks smart," he said, "ye want to go down near the water to an address I'll give ye and see the way my boys, Ed and Sam, can open oysters! I guess that'll give ye something to go by when ye're talking of smartness."—Exchange.

Willing to Be Honest.

Phil May, the great English artist, earned his first fame in Australia. One day a broken down minister applied to him for charity, and May engaged him as a model. As a joke he also demanded that his eighty-year-old pensioner agree to leave him his skeleton when he died. When May left Australia he called his model in. "You've played me a dirty trick," said May, "by swindling me out of that skeleton. I could have bought one in sound order and condition for half the money you've cost me." The old fellow, conscious of his base ingratitude to his best and most patient friend, answered: "Don't be angry with me, Mr. May. It's not my fault. I meant to keep my word. Stay in Sydney a few months longer and give me another chance to show you that I am a man of honor."

Redhot Plays.

"It is a tremendous undertaking to get a new play accepted and produced," once said the late Clyde Fitch to a friend. "So many are written, and so few ever see the light of day. An English playwright with a gift of humorous exaggeration illustrated this fact to me once. He told me how he submitted a play to a celebrated actor and how in the course of the conversation the actor remarked:

"'Don't you think it is growing chilly in this room?'

"'Yes; it is rather,' the young playwright admitted.

"Then the actor rang a bell, and a servant forthwith appeared.

"'James,' said the actor, 'this room is rather cold. You may put three more manuscripts on the fire.'"—Lippincott's.

A Competent Critic.

A famous actor at an elaborate entertainment at a Fifth avenue millionaire's palace in New York rose to recite Mrs. Browning's "Dead Pan." As he announced his subject and prepared to begin he heard a lady near him say distinctly:

"What is the next piece? Something funny, I hope. Oh, yes—'The Dead Pan!' Dear me, how odd! Of course it must be funny—something about bad cooking, I suppose."

Playing Her Cards.

Tommy—May I stay up a little longer? Ethel—What do you want to stay up for? Tommy—I want to see you and Mr. Green playing cards. Mr. Green—But we are not going to play cards. Tommy—Oh, yes, you are, for I heard mamma saying to Ethel that everything depended on the way in which she played her cards tonight.

Cautious.

The young housekeeper was looking at some soft shell crabs squirming and wriggling in their bed of seaweed.

"They're very nice," said the dealer. "Shall I send you a dozen?"

"Yes," answered the innocent, "if you are sure they are fresh."—New York Journal.

Trials and Temptations.

Every man deems that he has precisely the trials and temptations which are the hardest of all for him to bear, but they are so because they are the very ones he needs.—Richter.

Fly Time.

Howell—What is the best time of day to go up in an airship? Powell—Well, I've always been a believer in early rising.—New York Press.

They can conquer who believe they can.—Dryden.

Queer Church Ornamentation.

The chancellor of the diocese who refused to sanction the design for a memorial window in a Carlisle church on the ground that an angel is depicted wearing the coat of arms of the dean and chapter of Carlisle would assuredly make short work of the Lincoln cathedral "Imp," which finds a place among the angels forming the angel choir in that building. Up and down England are to be found hundreds of examples of the humor of ecclesiastical architects of a past age, from the snarling griffins worked into the stonework of Henry VII.'s chapel, Westminster abbey, to the dun cow and milkmaids in Durham cathedral. A cat playing a violin can be seen in Wells cathedral, and in Hereford cathedral two cats, apparently performing a violin duet. Boston "Stump" is crowded with fantastic carvings among which may be mentioned a wife chastising her husband, a teacher caning a pupil and an orchestra composed of bears playing an organ, a bagpipe and a drum.—Westminster Gazette.

Bread and Dyspepsia.

The conclusion that wheat bread is unfit for dyspeptics, sometimes jumped at because ill effects are noticed to follow its use, is erroneous. On the contrary, it has been pointed out by Bouchard and others that farinaceous food is peculiarly adapted to some dyspeptic patients. It is the microbes in the starch which are capable of producing irritating acids that cause the trouble. To avoid this Bouchard recommends that only the crust or toasted crumbs of the bread be used by dyspeptics, particularly those whose stomachs are dilated. The reason of this is explained by the fact that baking temporarily, though not permanently, arrests the fermentation of dough. When it is again heated by the warmth of the stomach the fermentation is renewed. In cases where the bread is toasted brown through the fermentation is stopped permanently.—Family Doctor.

She Wanted Both.

The matinee performance was about half over when a distracted looking woman with a curly haired youngster of six sought out the man in the box office.

"There are boxes on your chairs in there," she began, "and they say drop a nickel in and get a box of candy."

"Yes, I see," asserted the man in the box office.

"Well," she continued indignantly, "I dropped a nickel in for my little girl."

"And couldn't you get the candy?" queried the box office man. "Wait; I'll see if we can get it out."

"Oh, yes," answered the woman; "I got the candy all right, but I couldn't get the nickel out."

And to the ticket man at least this remark furnished a more dramatic moment than any in the play.—Louisville Times.

Dean Swift and the Cook.

"Moderation in all things" is the best precept for everyday life. There is a good story about Dean Swift apropos of the value of never overdoing anything.

The dean's cook one day overroasted the leg of mutton for dinner, and in consequence she was summoned to the dining room. "Cook," said the dean in a pleasant voice, "this leg of mutton is overdone; take it back and do it less."

"Impossible, your reverence!" exclaimed the cook.

"Well," replied her master, "supposing it had been underdone, you could easily have done it more."

"Certainly, your reverence."

"Then," said the dean, "let this be a lesson to you. If you commit a fault always take care that it is a fault which will admit of a remedy."

The Duration of a Dream.

One evening Victor Hugo was dictating letters to his secretary. Overcome by fatigue, the great man dropped into a slumber. A few moments afterward he awoke, haunted by a dream which, as he thought, had extended over several hours, and he blamed his secretary for sitting there waiting for him instead of wakening him or else going away. What was his surprise when the bewildered secretary told him that he had only just finished writing the last sentence dictated to him.

Goodness.

Whatever mitigates the woes or increases the happiness of others is a just criterion of goodness, and whatever injures society at large or any individual in it is a criterion of iniquity. One should not quarrel with a dog without a reason sufficient to vindicate one through all the courts of morality.—Goldsmith.

Good Proof.

"Guess I must have been born unlucky."

"What makes you say that?"

"Well, for instance, I went to a ball game once. There were eighteen players on the diamond, fifteen or twenty on the benches, 10,000 people in the grand stand, 20,000 on the bleachers, and—the ball hit me!"—Toledo Blade.

A Proof.

"That girl is trying to make a fool of me."

"Oh, no! She never tries anything ready made."—Baltimore American.

A Woman's Mind.

Sillicus—A woman never seems able to make up her mind. Cynicus—Why should she? She would only change it again.—Philadelphia Record.

Who bravely dares must sometimes risk a fall.—Smollett.

An Epic of the Backwoods.

One of the epics of the backwoods told by John G. Neihardt in "The River and I," is the adventure of old Hugh Glass, who was terribly mauled by a grizzly up the Missouri, so terribly that the rest of the expedition pushed on, leaving a young friend with several others to see the end. "It seemed plain that he would have to go soon. So the young friend and the others left the old man in the wilderness to finish the job by himself. They took his weapons and hastened after the main party, for the country was hostile.

"But one day old Glass woke up and got one of his eyes open. And when he saw how things stood he swore he would live merely for the sake of killing his false friend. He crawled to a spring close by, where he found a bush of ripe bullberries. He waited day after day for strength and finally started out to crawl a small matter of a hundred miles to the nearest fort. And he did it too! Also he found his friend after much wandering—and forgave him."

Always Feminine.

A young chap was walking along a business street with a very pretty girl when he happened to glance into a couple of windows where the latest styles of men's overcoats and suits were displayed. The girl noticed it. She stopped and exclaimed: "What a dandy overcoat! Why don't you get one of those, Bob? You'll look fine inside of that."

She looked at everything in that window, and the young chap was delighted at her interest in men's clothes.

"You're all right, Grace," said he. "That's what I like about you. Most girls would rather look at lingerie waists than at a man's overcoat and suits."

The girl laughed. "Well, Bob," said she, "to be perfectly honest, the mirrors in that window are something to cry for. I was trying to see if my hat was on straight!"

The Merits of "Angelick Snuff."

Angelick snuff, the most noble composition in the world, removing all manner of disorders of the head and brain, easing the most excruciating pain in a moment, taking away all swimming and giddiness proceeding from vapours, etc.; also drowsiness, sleepiness and other lethargick effects, perfectly curing deafness to admiration and all humours and soreness in the eyes, etc. Corroborates the brain, comforts the nerves and revives the spirits. Its admirable efficacy in all the above mentioned diseases has been experienced above a thousand times and very justly causes it to be esteemed the most beneficial snuff in the world. Price is, a paper, with directions. Sold only at Mr. Payn's toy shop at the Angel and Crown, in St. Paul's churchyard, near Cheapside.—Advertisement in London Paper, Aug. 6, 17[illegible].

Brignoli In a Temper.

On one occasion Bianchi, the noted teacher, went on the stage to see Brignoli, the famous singer, whom he found pacing up and down like a madman, humming over his part.

"Why, Brig, what is the matter with you? Are you nervous?" he asked.

"Yes, I am nervous," was the reply as he walked harder and faster than ever.

"But, Brig, you ought not to be nervous. I've heard you sing the part 200 times. I heard you sing it thirty years ago."

"Thirty years ago! Who are you that should know so much?"

"Who am I? You know who I am, and I know who you are."

"Very well; you know what I am, but I am sure you do not know what you are, and if you wish I will tell you. You are a fool!"

Hazing Him.

"Mr. Chairman," said the new member of the literary club, "I move you, sir"—

"I rise to a point of order, Mr. Chairman," interrupted one of the other members.

"State your point of order."

"The gentleman says 'I move you.' It is not only out of order but utterly absurd for a man of 114 pounds to talk of 'moving' a chairman who weighs 300."

"The point is well taken!" roared the presiding officer, bringing his gravel down with a resounding thud. "The gentleman will merely 'move' or take his seat!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Cent.

A cent is a little thing, but in the aggregate it is mighty. We speak of the "copper cent," but it is not entirely copper. Its composition is 95 per cent copper, 3 per cent tin and 2 per cent zinc. That alloy is in reality bronze, and the official name of the cent is "bronze." There used to be a copper cent, but an act discontinuing its coinage was passed in 1857. For seven years (1857-64) we had a nickel cent and up to 1857 a copper half cent.

Spoiling His Advantage.

Robert Lowe, the English journalist, was always saying good things. "Look at that fool throwing away his natural advantages!" he exclaimed when a deaf member of the house of commons put up his ear trumpet.

A Mile.

Mr. Baggie—Confound that tailor. These trousers are a mile too long. Mrs. Baggie—How much shall I turn them up? Mr. Baggie—About half an inch.

It is lawful to pray God that we be not led into temptation, but not lawful to skulk from those that come to us.—R. L. Stevenson.

Mrs. David Barlett is enjoying a visit in Tyrone and Altoona.

William T. Royer, of Tyrone, was a Bellefonte visitor on Sunday.

James B. Cook visited over Sunday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Cook.

A little bit of sunshine these days makes a fellow unconsciously hear the welcome words: "Play ball!"

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Crider returned home on Saturday evening, after a two-week visit to Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

Merv S. Betz, of Jacksonville, well known merchant, farmer and politician, transacted business and greeted friends in town on Monday.

On Monday, February 19th., Dr. E. S. Dorworth, father of the editor of "The Republican," quietly celebrated his 78th. birthday anniversary.

Mrs. J. W. Hollenback, of Philadelphia, mother of "Bill" Hollenback, the coach at State College, last week had the misfortune to fall and fracture an arm.

James Conley, a brother of J. Will Conley, of this place, returned on Saturday to his home in Illinois. He had been visiting in this section since the death of his father several weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Williams, of Unionville, were visitors with friends in Bellefonte between trains on Saturday. Ed. is about closing negotiations to enter the service of the Lippincott publishing company.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lucas and baby, from Tyrone, and Mrs Bertha Hoffman, of Howard, were visitors on Saturday at the home of Mrs. John Meese, in Bellefonte. Mr. Lucas is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Lucas, of Howard.

Mrs. G. Fred Musser is expected home this week from Philadelphia, where she recently underwent an operation on one of her ears. While she was in the city the Musser home was in charge of Mr. Musser's sister, Mrs. Lydia Bowman.

Dorothy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Corl, has been quite ill for several days, threatened with what it is feared is appendicitis. Mr. Corl, as is known, is located in Chicago, and Mrs. Corl has been getting things in readiness to move to that city on or about April 1st.

Andrew, the bright little son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Runkle, is a sufferer from measles. He possesses all the energy and spirit of the healthy American boy, and it is a pretty severe tax on his patience to be kept indoors when other youngsters are out and enjoying themselves.

Prof. C. L. Gramley, of Rebersburg, was in town several days ago looking the field over before formally entering himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Legislature. The big, genial Professor said that he was still considering the matter and if he could arrange his private affairs to suit, he probably would become a candidate.

Katherine Edmundson, one of those interesting grand-daughters of Robert Cole, the architect, is suffering these days from an attack of the measles. Measles are not exactly the most desirable companion, but since Katherine was scheduled to have them she picked out the cold, ugly weather as the best time for her to be an invalid. When the warm, sunshiny days come along, Katherine will be able to be outdoors at play, even if some of the other children are housed up with the measles.

Mrs. Paul Musser, of Pine Grove Mills, who has been ill for several weeks and during the greater of that time has been undergoing treatment in the Lock Haven hospital, was able to return to her home on Saturday of last week. This will be gratifying news to her many friends. She is a daughter of Jacob W. Sunday, and is a most estimable young lady. While she was a patient in the hospital her husband and her father spent as much time as possible in Lock Haven, in order to be with her and see to it that she received everything in the way of care and attention.

J. Homer Decker, whose home is at Pine Grove Mills but who has for several years been a clerk in the office of the County Commissioners, expects to go to Sunbury about March 1st., at which place he will be established in the branch office of the York Bridge Company. His departure from Bellefonte will be regretted by many admiring friends. He is a young man of sterling worth, possessing exceptional ability and displaying energy and willingness to render his best service to his employers. Loyalty to the interests of those with whom he is associated is but one of many splendid traits, and this, coupled with his ability and willingness to hustle admirably fits him for the broader field of work which he is about to enter. Knowing his worth and keenly regretting his contemplated departure, we confidently predict and sincerely hope he will meet with the success he so well merits.

The Bellefonte Academy basketball team scored a notable victory on Saturday afternoon over the team of the State Forestry School, at Mt. Alto. The visiting team was regarded as so much faster and better versed in the fine points of the game that the Academy boys hardly dared to hope for a victory. The game proved to be by far the best seen on the local floor this season. For a time the visitors were leading, 15 to 9, but as the game progressed the Academy boys gradually forged to the front and finally won out, 36—30. On Friday the Academy team went to Williamsport, where the Dickinson Seminary five won 30—27. In view of the fact that a few weeks ago the Academy without particular effort, won by 20 points over Dickinson, last week's result caused no little surprise and some speculation as to how it was accomplished. The fact that an official was taken out of the game would suggest, at least, that some of his decisions were open to question. In March the Academy team will go to Pittsburg. The game will be with the University of Pittsburg, rated as one of the best teams in the State. There are 18 or more students attending the Academy whose homes are in or about Pittsburg and the game to be played in that city is being accorded considerable prominence in the advance articles in the several Pittsburg newspapers.

William T. DeHaas, of Clearfield, who is contesting for the Republican nomination for Congress in this district, was a pleasant caller at "The Republican" office yesterday. He had planned spending several weeks canvassing Centre County at this time, but owing to the rough weather concluded to return home and wait for more suitable conditions.

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday morning, at 11 o'clock, the contracting parties being Miss Helen T. Hull, of Bellefonte, and William W. Bickett, of Snow Shoe. The happy young couple are enjoying a honeymoon tour to eastern cities and upon their return will reside at Snow Shoe. The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Mary T. Hull and is a charming young lady who has a host of friends in Bellefonte.

I have made arrangements with the American Ladies' Tailors, of Chicago, to cut, make and trim your own goods at very moderate prices, considering the high grade tailoring this noted firm makes. They make a specialty of special designs and guarantee a perfect fit, and if the fit is not satisfactory you will not have to take it and we will pay you for your goods.

If you think that politics isn't cutting much of a figure and precipitating red-hot arguments these days, just drop into Tom. Fleming's shoe repairing shop in the Bush Arcade. The debates cover the qualifications of borough officers up to candidates for President of the United States. If some of the candidates could hear their fine points discussed, as they are put upon the "pan," they couldn't help undergoing a marked change in the opinion they have of themselves.

A quiet but pretty wedding will occur at the home of Mrs. Clara Denius, on East Bishop Street, this evening at 7 o'clock, when her daughter, Miss Helen G. Denius, becomes the bride of Robert E. The bride-to-be is one of Bellefonte's most popular young ladies and is in every way qualified to grace the new home which has been provided for her.

READY TO SWIM

Palatial Pool at Y. M. C. A. Now Receiving Finishing Touches.

The handsome swimming pool at the Bellefonte Y. M. C. A., made possible by the very generous donation by Mrs. Margaret H. Wilson, is now receiving the finishing touches and will be ready for use in the course of a few days. The palatial pool is ready now, in fact, a few minor details to the shower bath equipment only remaining to be completed. Delay in shipment of a few articles has held up the contractors, who had planned finishing up several weeks ago.

Although the swimming pool has not been turned over for use by Y. M. C. A. members, it has been put through the most thorough kind of tests to make sure that everything is all right. The big marble and glass brick lined concrete box proved to be perfectly water tight, holding the immense volume of water turned into it without the slightest leak. While the Y. M. C. A. members are delighted with the new pool, their pride in it does not begin to equal that of Lewis Wallace, the contractor and builder, who has given every detail of construction his personal attention and who now is justly elated over the result.

To fully appreciate what a magnificent and handsome pool has been built just a few feet off from High Street, in the very heart of the business section of town, one must visit the Y. M. C. A. rooms and see for himself. To begin with, a huge concrete box was built, measuring 17 feet or more wide and 70 feet in length. Beginning with a depth of about four feet at one end it gradually falls to a depth of about 9 feet at the other end. The floor and side walls of this concrete box are lined with delicately tinted glass brick, which stand out and blend in a beautiful harmony of colors when the pool is filled with clear, spring water. A specially designed heating boiler warms the water before it enters the pool at the shallow end, it being possible to make the temperature as hot or as cool as may be desired. At the deepest point of the pool is an escape trap. The hot water naturally goes to the surface and the cold water to the bottom, where it is carried off by means of the escape trap and again passed through the coils of the heating boiler. The water is thus kept fresh by constantly changing, the surface scum overflowing into a narrow drain which extends about all four sides of the pool. For those who enjoy a plunge, there is a fine diving board at the deepest part of the pool, while at the opposite end the water is sufficiently shallow for bathers unable to swim.

But magnificent as it is, the big pool is only a part of the bathing equipment installed. A broad doorway separates the pool from the gymnasium, where spectators may assemble on occasions of exhibitions in the pool. The shower bath equipment, a short distance away, is of the most modern type. A metal ceiling has been erected and the old marble sidewalls have been reset. Nearby are dressing rooms with lockers.

All in all, the swimming pool is something of which the Y. M. C. A. may well be proud and in the years to come will be enjoyed by many whose thanks will go out to the donor, Mrs. Wilson, whose name appears on a bronze tablet at one end of the pool, modestly testifying that she has done so much for the comfort and enjoyment of others.

"When the Bridegroom Cometh."

On Friday afternoon of last week Rev. and Mrs. I. C. Shearer arrived in Bellefonte on the 4.20 o'clock train. Their wedding was solemnized a short time ago and they were just home from their honeymoon tour. During the evening they visited the postoffice and several uptown stores. Just as they arrived at the diamond, in front of the Court House, the little band of Salvation Army workers, who hold a brief service there each evening, began to sing: "The bridegroom cometh." Mr. Shearer could not suppress a broad smile which spread over his face, while Mrs. Shearer enjoyed a good laugh over the incident. Meanwhile the Salvation Armyists continued with their singing, wholly unconscious of the fluttering of the two hearts so recently made to beat as one.

THE CHARITY BALL

Annual Event Proved to be Delightful and Successful Function.

It would be difficult to imagine a more delightful function than the annual Charity Ball, held in the Bellefonte armory on Thursday evening of last week. It was a success socially and financially and reflected much credit upon the committee of the Woman's Club having the affair in charge.

Seldom if ever has the armory been more tastefully decorated than on this occasion. The side walls and the stage end of the room were almost completely hidden by a profusion of Christmas trees and other greens, while overhead were suspended baskets of flowers. An innovation was the placing of the orchestra to the south side of the room, instead of in the centre of the floor, and it was one which met enthusiastic approval by the dancers.

Many of the costumes were decidedly pretty, evolving clever ideas and showing much care and thought in their preparation. There were about one hundred in costumes in the grand march, which was led by six heralds, carrying gilded trumpets from which hung banners decorated as were also their surcoats, with coats of arms. Next came a group of characters from "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass," "Alice," herself; the "Duchess," the "Red and White Queens," the "White Rabbit," the "Hatter," the "Caterpillar," and the "Fish" footmen. Following came an "Irish Clan." Buster Browns, cowboys, Indians, Gypsies, German and Swiss peasants, Colonial men and maidens, Japanese, Eskimo, Foreign officers, Spanish ladies, a "Bride of 1812," a lion, an "Advertising Maiden," a pirouette and several dancers and also some fools.

The following statement was this week issued by the committee in charge of the ball:

"The Charity Ball Committee of the Woman's Club wish to thank the public for the interest shown in their undertaking.

"The Christmas trees, which were carefully kept by so many, were used as decorations about the walls. The day they were collected was exceptionally cold and for this reason some places were missed.

"The greens from the dance given by the Elks Club were very generously passed on to the armory and were in such profusion that no more was needed.

"The armory was well heated and lighted by the Bellefonte Steam Company and the attendance at this dance was far more than was expected. The committee was repaid for its efforts by the appreciation shown by all.

(Signed)
"Mary Meek,
"Chairman."

A black muff was left in the dressing room, which can be claimed at the home of Miss E. M. Blanchard.

Smith became the bride of Mr. Jerome G. Harper. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. Dr. G. E. Hawes, and was witnessed by the immediate families of the contracting parties. Following the nuptial ceremony a pretty wedding breakfast was enjoyed.

In addition to the bride's mother, those in attendance included Mrs. Susan Wooden, of Tyrone; Mrs. Henry Harris, Hardman P. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harper and Miss Lulu Harper.

Mr. Harper and his bride will enjoy their honeymoon visiting eastern cities.
